Quarter 3

A MESSAGE FROM

THE DIRECTOR

Looking back on the third quarter of the year, we can see how the efforts we made to create new futures and end slavery were catalytic. This was not a season of reaping a harvest—it was a season of planting seeds.

One of the most profound ways we felt we planted seeds was at the first ever Freedom Summit, which took place in Orlando, Florida, on July 10-11, 2015. The year and a half we spent dreaming, planning, networking, and laboring was well worth it. We are hugely grateful for Adam Norsworthy, who directed the event along with his small but mighty administrative team, who sacrificed many sleepless nights and long days to make it the fun, enjoyable, and meaningful event that it was.

Other special people we owe our thanks to include: our sponsors, including Seattle Pacific University, Spring Arbor University, and Point Loma University; our partners Florida Abolitionist, the Wesleyan Holiness Consortium Freedom Network, and International Child Care Ministries; Jesse McDonald of Eastern Sky Photography for volunteering her time and talent to photograph the event; our main speakers, workshop leaders, and musical guests; our vendors and exhibitors, and our loyal volunteers. Please see www.freedomsummit15.com for a full list of our partners.

As we enter into the final quarter of the year, we do with the hope and confidence of knowing we are starting to see the seeds we're planting to blossom in life-giving ways that, with the grace of God, will have lasting impact.

VICKI LOPES (Turlock, California) had a presence at her community farmer's market this summer to talk about human trafficking and collect donations. She also held an upcycled t-shirt and scarf making party to fundraise for Eden's Glory.

MATT OSBORNE (Spring Arbor, Michigan) and his team are screening documentaries, developing curriculum, and establishing access to resources for victims of trafficking in hotels through S.O.A.P. ministries.

JUSTIN BEHRAND (Rochester, New York) and his team held their annual 5km run in September for over 200 people and raised $1,700 for the Set Free Movement. They also held a fair trade vendor sale to introduce ethically-sourced products to their church.

GINGER COAKLEY & ANNIE SCHOMAKER (Greenville, Illinois) opened Eden's Glory in September and welcomed the first survivors into their new home. They also actively train their community on trafficking interventions human trafficking.

KELLY GRACE (Portland, Oregon) is equipping first responders by assembling and distributing survivor care kits. She also partners with an outreach ministry that cares for women who are street workers.

BONNIE BRANN (Seattle, Washington) is working with her church to improve the local branch of foster care to protect vulnerable children and is partnering with a shelter to help survivors of abuse.
